SONGS, LYRICS, AND NOTES:

Hush Up, Father

Michael W. Dean: Music

Phil Wormuth: Lyrics

Kip Cameron: voice

LYRICS:

Mama broke out the best Chinet -
 the education began with dinner.
 Highly-trusting Romeo went viral
 "Oh, gosh - I don't have sideburns!"
 (how they hated to see him cry.)
 They proceeded to ravage his ego with crude flair.
 Side-dish garnish good for flies.

Gushing, disgusting dinner gibberish -
 "Hush up, father! Enough yelling at yachts!" cried mother.
 "Spaghetti is ready!"
 Framed sketch displayed his beloved "Tahiti Firefly."
 Dinner was diuretic; the victim's intestines suddenly twisted.
 Feeling flushed (and urgently itching to ditch) he mentioned something purely inane, like "I heard Uranus is in retrograde..."

...then made a hasty, desperate exit to the nearest neighborhood convenience store where he used the facilities (coincidentally) during a botched-up robbery where he accidentally bought it for eternity.
 Shortly after the unfortunate incident, the family reported that they "...hated to see him go, but understood."
 A truly sad tale of love and loss; what a rip-off!

Phil Notes:

These lyrics are a culmination of all the bad dinner parties I've attended over the past - luckily, I survived. The line about not having sideburns is especially compelling to me (for reasons I care not to divulge at this time.)

Driving Flummoxed with Sex Bag

Michael W. Dean: Music

Phil Wormuth: Lyrics

Kip Cameron: voice

LYRICS:

Attention all guests:

In the unfortunate event that, due to a number of unforeseen circumstances, you have failed to check the premises for incriminating evidence, we, for a moderate fee, will gladly (and discreetly) forward all items of interest to the address of that "special someone" you trust; just leave it to our crack cleaning crew. Enjoy your stay and feel free to tip generously.

- Thanks, the management.

Phil Notes:

This one hits home for me – after spending years cleaning up after people... I wrote the "Attention All Guests" piece with full intentions to send a message to all those clueless people out there to "take care of their personal business" (you know what I mean if you have ever worked in the service industry.)

Phil NOTES:

I especially dig this song, especially for the repartee between our various lyrics. Somehow, they all fit. We have complimentary cut-up poetry styles; each evocative and unique. This song is an excellent example of that.

Kitty in the Hospital

How'd he get in here?

He probably shouldn't be in here.

is he sterile?

I don't know.

He's lickin' his butt,

so I don't think so.

I was in the hospital

severe infection

I'm getting better now.

But I was delirious

I kept seeing

my kitty out of the corner of my eye.

Kitty in the Hospital

MWD NOTES:

It's a little 3-minute pop song I wrote to end our album.

Still pretty sick, but making this made me feel better.

Took about two hours start to finish.

Is a true story, is about my cat, Beast. The black cat on the album cover.

In the hospital I kept seeing Beast out of the corner of my eye. And when I slept I kept thinking he was going to jump across me and land on my stomach to get to the other side of me, as he does sometimes at home.

This is what I had, that sent me to the hospital for 3 nights:

OVERALL ALBUM NOTES:

Phil:

This album is unique in that, right in the midst of finalizing it, Michael was struck sick – really sick. I'm glad to report that he is currently on the mend and back in the groove of making and producing great music. Looking forward to the next album!
